Dear FCC:

As a concerned citizen who has watched television for forty-five years, I would like to share my opinion, in hopes that the FCC will not loosen restrictions on nudity and violence but tighten them.

As an educator, I am aware of the influence that media has on young minds and hearts. It is my opinion that the increase of nudity and violence on television has led to more promiscuity and domestic violence. As well, we are seeing more young people lose the innocence and purity of waiting to deal with issues that they are not old enough to correctly process especially in cause and effect results.

The creators of television programs can get the message across without actually showing sex acts or showing the effect of violence. They can be realistic without being crude and authentic without being gruesome.

Television is public broadcasting that should be able to be viewed by all the public. Please increase the standards and not loosen them.

Sincerely,
Anne Buroker, BMus. Ed
